President South End Ladies' Golf Club, Chicago, Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound After the Best Doctors Had Failed To Help Her.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I can thank you for perfect health to-day. Life looked so dark to me a year or two ago. I had constant pains, my limbs swelled, I had dizzy spells, and never knew one day how I would feel the next. I was nervous and had no appetite, neither could I sleep soundly nights. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, used in conjunction with your Sanative Wash, did more for me than all the medicines and the skill of the doctors. For eight months I have enjoyed perfect health. I verily believe that most of the doctors are guessing and experimenting when they try to cure a woman with an assortment of complications, such as mine; but you do not guess. How I wish all suffering women could only know of your remedy; there would be less suffering I know."—LAURA HOWARD, 113 Newberry Ave., Chicago, Ill. —$6000 forfeit if above testimonial is not genuine.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all women who are ill to write her for advice. Address Lynn, Mass., giving full particulars.

THE INDIAN AS A FARMER

THE American Indian is of that physique which makes a good farmer, and the wonder is that they were not sent into the fields ere this instead of making them go to school. Education is essential, but ninety-nine per cent. of those who return home from school either do nothing or go into farm life. The other one per cent. become professional men. Within the past few years the strides made by the American red man in farming have been remarkable. More Indians are taking to the plow than the public would

In a few years they found the untutored savage quite willing to starve or fight. In most cases he was more anxious to fight. Some of the most atrocious crimes have been committed by these same border redskins who had been placed on a certain tract of land and told to work it. It was after all this that the Government learned the Indian had to be taught. So after years of patient teaching, red men in farm life have become a matter of course. It is their shortest cut to civilization.

In the United States to-day there believe. But it is also true that fully twenty per cent. of them, after having passed through a training-school, will return to the reservation and go on the downward trail again. It is quite easy to teach an Indian, but another matter to make him remember and obey that which he has been taught.

One may travel through any reservation in the West to-day and find many Indians at work in the fields. It may seem odd to see a blanketed buck hoeing corn or driving a binder, but such things are quite common in New Mexico, Arizona, Dakota, and Oklahoma. In Oklahoma vast fields of wheat are are 38,000 Indians who earn their own living by farm-work. Last year they sold their farm products for a combined sum of $1,408,865, over and above the expenses of living. This was nearly $40 per capita, which is very good considering the fact that thirty per cent. of them have never before farmed an acre of land. Some of the Indian farmers never did a day's work in all their life before. Some have been at work for five or six dians in the United States—are, contrary to general belief, the most industrious. They had out last year 20,000 acres of land, from which they raised 100,000 bushels of wheat, 10,000 bushels of oats, and 300,000 bushels of corn.

The Sioux outnumber the Osages two to one, hence the value of their products was even greater than those of the Osages. But the Sioux go in for cattle-raising, having sold 12,000 years. One farmer, a Kiowa living in Oklahoma, raised last year wheat making twenty-six bushels to the acre, and corn running sixty bushels. He tilled the fields alone, except in harvest-time, when he engaged a number of harvest hands to assist. His income from last year's crop was $3500. His farm is a model one. Originally the land, 600 acres in extent, was set aside to him by the Indian agent. It lies in the valley near the Washita River, and the soil is well watered and rich. In the edge of a patch of trees bordering on the farm was erected a nice five-room cottage. The stock was fattened, and every farming implement was shedded for winter. This Indian, who was once a noted fighter, now puts in seven months in each year on his place, and works even harder than the average white farmer.

While one cannot say too much good concerning his farming ability, his moral character is in keeping with other Indians. Sometimes, when he can get the liquor, he will remain drunk for a whole month. He wears a blanket in the winter, and attends the medicine dances and dog feasts in summer. So while the Government has tamed him in one way they still have a great deal to accomplish. His steps are slow and halting. As it is with this Kiowa farmer one will also find it with many other Indians. They cannot take many advance steps in one year; not even five will see a complete change in their condition. To head of cattle in one season, and made $53,000 therefrom. The Cherokees are also great cattle-raisers.

Practical farming is now being taught in many Indian schools of the Southwest country. An experiment of much value was attempted among the Cheyennes in Oklahoma not long ago. An Indian agent wished the school-boys to milk cows for him, and agreed to give each one who milked for three months a nice calf. Fifteen boys started, but they were so ridiculed by the older men of the tribe that twelve of them gave it up. Three won the calves, and the pride of being owners of the cattle served as quite an assistance in getting other Indian children to try. After a year twelve boys had won calves, and the agent asked them to plow corn for him, agreeing to give them all the corn they could grow. Ten boys volunteered to grow corn, and they actually raised 3000 bushels, which was sold and afterwards converted into thirty head of steers.

Each steer was branded with an individual brand chosen by the boy owner. This made them prouder than ever, and more industrious. Every boy at the agency wanted to go to work at once, and as a result of that experiment the Cheyennes are the most industrious farmers of any tribe so recently on the war-path.—W. R. Draper, in Harper's Weekly.

Remarkable Lighthouse Construction. Remarkable among engineering tasks is the building of the new lighthouse off Beachy Head, in England, which involves submarine construction, the
